

Hannah has worked as a music tutor in South Wales since 2013. As a teacher, Hannah aims to make lessons fun and varied for students, with students encouraged to explore a wide range of musical genres. Building confidence through performances and personalised challenges is key to keeping piano studies fresh for each young person. Students are able to work towards ABRSM graded exams should they wish (we have a 100% pass rate, with most achieving Merit or Distinction level). Opportunities also arise throughout the year to take part in competitions, concerts, duet classes and more. Recently, students have won awards in a variety of Eisteddfods and Festivals throughout Wales and England, as well as being invited to perform in the ABRSM High Scorer's Concert.

Hannah began her musical studies at a young age, going on to study music at both the Royal Northern College of Music and Manchester University, and becoming a regional finalist in the BBC Young Musician of the Year competition during this time. Now, with a family of her own, Hannah enjoys guiding students through their own unique journeys in musical education.
